HAND DUKE NICHOLAS DEFEATED ALONG ENTIRE LINE BEFORE GALICIAN FORTRESS.

RUSS IN LAST STAND

Only a Supreme Movement on Part of Russians Can Save Them From Decisive Blow, Says London.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, June 22.—Announcement was made by the Overseas News Agency that the Russians before Lemburg have been defeated along their whole line and are fighting only to gain time in order to save their artillery, and other war material.

City's Capture Expected.

London, June 22.—Nothing but a sudden and unexpected blow by Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian forces in the field, can now save Lemburg, the capital of Galicia in the hands of the Russians for nearly ten months, from returning to the possession of its former owners and evacuation of the city by the Russians is expected in London.

After yielding on the Grodek lines, the Russian armies retired virtually to the outskirts of the city of Lemburg itself. The Austrian official announcements on hostilities, speaks of the Russians as attacking at many points, but these points are assumed in London to be merely rear guard action to enable the main forces to withdraw.

Russ Lines in Tact.

Dispatches reaching London say the armies of Emperor Nicholas are virtually in tact, and that their ability to resume the initiative once their ammunition replenished, has not been greatly impaired.

Headquarters in Galicia attribute the recent decided successes of the Austro-German forces through their great superiority in artillery.

SIX YEARS' PRISON TERM FOR TREASON

Christian De Wet, Leader in South African Rebellion, Receives Sentence Today.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Bloemfontein, Union of South Africa, June 22.—Sentence of six years imprisonment and a fine of £10,000, was imposed today on General Christian De Wet, leader of the South African rebellion, against the British government, found guilty yesterday of treason on eight counts.

General De Wet was commander in chief of the free state forces during the Boer war.

In 1914 he headed a rebellion in the Orange Free State and Western Transvaal against Great Britain. He was captured, however, and sentenced to life imprisonment, which resulted in this sentence, was begun June 10.

De Wet was one of the great leaders of the Boer war as commander-in-chief of the Orange Free State forces and the taking of Ladysmith, after which he was placed in full command.

In the latter days of the war he caused the British army much embarrassment because of the tactics by which he made vain, for a long time, the pursuit of his remnant of an army by fully twenty British columns. At the Vorendingen peace conference he was one of the signatories, and in the union government that followed he accepted the office of minister of agriculture.

PRAISES NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING MEDIUM

SPEAKER AT ADVERTISING CONVENTION IN CHICAGO URGES EFFICIENCY OF DAILY PRESS.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, June 22.—Present day newspapers are a better advertising medium than ever, because they have a more gripping national power, a power that should be studied by every thinking advertiser, Joseph R. Finn of Chicago told delegates attending the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, here today.

Merchandise News Important.

Mr. Finn spoke of "The Newspaper," the advertiser and the Advertising Agent. He spoke of the importance of advertising the news about merchandising and said there was nothing closer to the heart of the reader than the news concerning buying opportunity.

"A newspaper without advertising," said Mr. Finn, "is like a lady's bathing suit without the girl—eloquently true."

"I believe in the efficiency of newspaper advertising, because I have seen what it can do in such a variety of lines, covering the entire range of human activity, that the possibility of luck or accident must be eliminated from consideration."

"It is the paper which publishes the true news that pays the advertiser best," Mr. Finn continued, "and the best advertising is that which makes the best newspaper. Truth is the slogan of the newspaper that has to win the lasting success—the widest influence."

"I have seen almost overnight, newspaper advertising and merchandising successes that would have been deemed incredible ten years ago, and the successes were solid—they stayed put."

Advertising Inspires Optimism.

"Undoubtedly the greatest thing that a newspaper can do for advertising—the business world, for humanity—is to spread the gospel of optimism to charter a straight course of confidence."

"A newspaper that deals in unquenching rumors, that dispenses loans, and that is always on the hair trigger of uncertainty, defeats the advertiser and defeats itself."

"It is the truth that good times and bad are each largely a matter of psychology."

All delegates of the convention held business sessions and adjourned at 11 o'clock. Tomorrow's sessions of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, Retail Advertising, Business Press, Association of Directory Publishers, Graphic Art Association, Outdoor Advertising Association, Magazine Association and the Association of the National Advertisers. There were also numerous conferences of book publishers, mail advertisers, house of editors, teachers of advertising and newspaper publishers.

Fraudulent Advertising.

"The Effect of Advertising Censorship on the Cash Drawer," was considered in remarks by Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times, at today's session of the Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. Mr. Wiley protested that he did not like the tone of the title assigned to his subject, and that it was not clean in its own nature, and that it was not the duty of the self-respecting newspaper publisher; it is to his advantage," he said.

"There can be no dispute as to the immorality of placing a fraudulent advertisement. In addition, it is a poor way to build up business. There is no stability about that kind of advertising. Legitimate advertising helps to build up a newspaper. Fraudulent advertising helps to pull it down."

There are many newspapers on a profitable basis which carry objectionable and fraudulent advertising. I know, however, of a number of newspapers now on the rocks which were once prosperous. I attribute their undoing to their lack of self-respect, lack of regard for their own reputa-

VILLA MEN TO PROTECT FOREIGNERS

PROMISE ADMIRAL HOWARD TO CHECK FURTHER DEPREDATIONS ON PART OF YAQUI INDIANS.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, June 22.—Ambassador Gerard has not been informed when he will receive a reply on submarine warfare. President Wilson said today he received a dispatch from Mr. Gerard yesterday and the ambassador seemed to be unable to lecture the time which would be required in Berlin for its preparation. The new note which the United States will send to Germany on the case of the American ship William F. Frye, sunk by the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, is about ready. The president will discuss it with Secretary Lansing tomorrow and it probably will be sent before the president leaves for the summer white house at Cornish, New Hampshire, tomorrow night.

CONDITIONS DESPERATE

American Ranch Reported Surrounded for Four Days by Eight Hundred Indians—Await U. S. Marines.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

On Board the U. S. Colorado off Guaymas, Sonora, Mexico, by Radio to San Diego, June 22.—Fifteen hundred Villa troops under General Sosa promised protection for foreigners in the Yaqui valley at a conference aboard the Colorado today between Admiral Howard, commanding the Pacific fleet and his staff and General Leyva, military commandant at Guaymas. General Leyva said that the landing of American marines might be misinterpreted by the masses of the Mexican people.

Conditions Desperate.

Washington, June 22.—Conditions in the Yaqui valley where the United States is faced with the possibility of landing forces to protect the settlers against raiding Indians, are described as desperate in today's state department advices. One settler who left the valley on the last train, and arrived at Nogales yesterday, said that the valley had been devastated and left without protection from the forty Villa troops who were the only soldiers in the region.

One ranch, presumably American owned, had been surrounded by five hundred mounted Indians and three hundred on foot. The settlers were prepared to defend themselves against attacks until American marines should arrive.

Mr. Albright said that Mayor-torrens's Mexican forces would be unable to check the Indians. Officials here believe, however, that the settlers left the valley because of the addition of troops ordered to the Yaqui region by the governor had been dispatched. More recent advices from American officials and others near the valley, it was said, had reported any new attacks on foreigners.

Carraza Troops at Capital?

Confirmation of a report that General Gonzales had begun the occupation of Mexico City, with Carraza troops, was lacking but a message from Consul Silliman at Vera Cruz said communications with the capital had been severed. Officials thought it possible that this might mean that Carraza forces had withdrawn from the capital and that a raiding force might be operating between Gonzales and Vera Cruz.

Reports from Monterey said eight thousand Carraza troops were here being fed daily by American Red Cross agents. Refugees arriving at Eagle Pass, Texas, from Saltillo said there was desperate need of relief there.

President Wilson said today he had no official knowledge that General Alvarez, Villa's chief lieutenant, was coming to Washington.

Bandits Kill American.

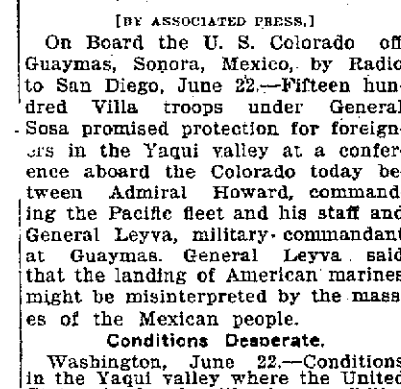

El Paso, Texas, June 22.—Steve Parmenter, an American, was killed at the El Favor mine in the state of Jalisco, by a band of bandits. The killing is attributed to bandits, but whether in the incident of fighting or while defending his property is not known. American arrivals declare that bandits later were some gold was taken from the corpse. It was said Parmenter formerly lived in Los Angeles.

General Leyva discounted any possibility of a conference with Yaqui chiefs. The Mexican president, he declared, and besides have "all the treachery and blood thirstiness of the Apaches."

The Mexicans thus far killed, he described as having been horribly mutilated and said crops just harvested had been carried away by the Indians as provisions for a future raid.

Fire Chihuahua.

El Paso, Texas, June 22.—Thomas Ormales, commanding officer at Juarez today, declared that a fire last night in Chihuahua destroyed the city market. A report that the hospital at Chihuahua was also destroyed and more than 2,000 women were killed, was received here but authorities in Juarez denied knowledge of such occurrence.

The city, however, was closed by the authorities yesterday, were allowed to reopen.

At the governor's home, it was stated, the militia would probably be withdrawn tonight.

TO SOLVE MYSTERY OF PRISON MURDER

Joliet Penitentiary Officials Confident That Identity of Mrs. Allen's Slayer Will Be Revealed.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Joliet, Ill., June 22.—Officials of the penitentiary here expected that the name of the convict who murdered the wife of Warden Allen on Sunday, will be known today. Deputy Warden Ryan said that he will be surprised if the confession were not at hand by night.

"Chicken Joe" Campbell, the negro trustee who has been the principal subject in the case, gave the information on which the prediction was based. At midnight last night Ryan said Campbell's cell, where he has been on bread and water and kept in a standing position most of the time since Sunday. The negro who was the last so far as is known, to see Mrs. Allen alive, was badly shaken by his treatment, but according to Ryan did not protest. Warden Allen declared after the inquest this morning that Campbell's testimony was absurd in part.

"His statement that he took the newspaper to Mrs. Allen at six o'clock in the morning is inconsistent with Ryan's habits," said the warden. "She was not an early riser and never bothered about the newspaper until after she had arisen and eaten breakfast."

Campbell testified that Mrs. Allen called him to bring her some water and to light a fire because the morning was cool. He brought the paper along with the water and some kindling, he said.

OCEAN WAS BOILING FROM VOLCANIC LAVA

Tokio, June 22.—Reports of a terrific volcanic eruption at South Sea Islands of Japan two days ago, has been brought into Yokohama by incoming steamers.

The disturbance is regarded here as direct cause of an earthquake shock in Central Japan yesterday, the strongest experienced in several years.

The main eruption took place at half past eight o'clock in the morning of Saturday, June 19. Its location is given as about seventy miles to the southeast of Hachioji Island, which is 15 miles directly south of Yokohama.

A pillar of fire and dense smoke obscured the sun and turned the day into night. Huge rocks and quantities of lava rained down into the sea and the waters are described as becoming "red and boiling." The steamers which observed the disturbance were struck by waves but escaped injury.

The earthquake in Japan yesterday damaged a number of houses in Tokyo, but there were no casualties.

HIGH FLOODS IMPETUS TO ENGLISH RIOTING

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, June 22.—Much of the breaking and looting of shops during the anti-German riots was due, says Sir John Pankhurst, to the increased cost of living. The English shops to suffer had all created hostility among their customers by putting up prices.

In most cases without warrants for Women, it is pointed out that a large number of the wives of Germans, in recent sufferers because of these riots, are English women. While these English women are living on greatly reduced incomes through the internment of their husbands, the German wives of Englishmen, who by reason of war well be supposed to have pro-German sympathies, are free and unmolested.

CONSIDERABLE BOARD'S GOV. PHILIP

SENDS SPECIAL MESSAGE TO LEGISLATURE ASKING PASSAGE OF BILL IN INTERESTS OF ECONOMY.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, June 22.—Governor Philip in a special message to the legislature today urged the passage of the measures which provide for the consolidation of various boards and commissions, a part of the administration's economy plan. The message also directed the public land and forestry situation, advising legislation along the lines indicated by the supreme court's decision on the subject.

Under suspension of the rules the assembly put through the Nye bill, the state assessment of railroad elevators at terminals, the amount of the tax, however, to be refunded to the locality in which the elevator stands. This measure is to take the place of the terminal tax law declared unconstitutional by the supreme court last January.

Not one strong audible voice was heard in favor of reconsidering the vote by which last week the assembly concurred in the senate amendment to the Stomper liquor license bill and it now goes to the governor. An amendment to the Usury bill increasing the amount that can be collected on personal property loans of less than $100 from 20 to 25 percent, was approved by the assembly and the bill was sent back to the senate.

The Arnold home rule for city amendment was laid over for Monday. The senate spent the morning on unimportant bills, laying over the big measures, including the water-power bill which comes up tomorrow.

The text of the governor's message follows:

TO THE HONORABLE THE LEGISLATURE:

The bill for the forestry case, (so-called), suggests that I should urgently recommend such legislative action as will supplement as efficiently as possible the working of the court in securing the state educational trust lands and funds from improper diversion thereof.

The constitutional plan was that all lands dedicated by grants from the United States to the state for educational purposes should be administered by the commissioners of public lands, composed of the attorney general, the state treasurer and the secretary of state. In the spirit thereof all lands which should be derived from swamp land grants and by the state constitution dedicated to educational purposes, so far as the proceeds thereof were not required to be used for the support of the common schools, placed by the legislature under the same jurisdiction as school lands proper. Thus the situation remained for some fifty years and until the untimely death of Governor Hoar, which the court has most emphatically condemned. Had the legislature appreciated that the lands were so impressed with special trusts, and in the main for educational purposes, that it had no competency to devote them to a purpose foreign thereto, it seems certain administrative control would have been left with the commissioners of public lands. Divided control, where there can be no division, would seem to be clearly bad policy and necessarily lead to waste and again endanger the integrity of the educational trust.

I, therefore, recommend that the forestry legislation be revised so as to eliminate all parts which have been condemned by the court, and restore to the public lands the control of all such lands which were in the hands of the board of conservation and make it the duty of the board of conservation to take charge of the field work of forestry, and to protect the trust lands from danger of loss by careless possession and realization on dead, dying and mature timber and annual forest products. If the board of conservation is not created by law, then the trust lands may be sold for such other employment as may be necessary in looking after the trust lands to be under the supervision of and accountable to such commissioners.

Since the great waste of remaining trust lands held by the board of conservation, and it is questionable whether the trust will not be conserved by withholding the lands from sale for some time, I recommend for your consideration that the board having administrative charge of the normal schools be accorded such advisory communication with the administration of such lands, especially with sales thereof, as will make their influence on such board efficient to protect any further attempt to divert the lands, or any part thereof, to other purposes, and prevent any undue haste in selling the same.

The present system of an independent board of forestry to handle the trust lands substantially independent of the constitutional board seems very poor policy in the first of the forestry decision. The lands can be made a source of income for school purposes, as was destroyed by the framers of the constitution. The scheme of retaining the lands for sale, wherever the same have been cut over is at best a poor business proposition and a burden upon the taxpayers of the state.

By the plan I recommended large sums of money can annually be saved to the taxpayers and the danger of again diverting and losing sight of the sacred character of the trust funds will be avoided.

I wish to call your attention to the fact that the law makes no provision for the safe-keeping of deeds and other papers and records covering lands belonging to the state. The result is that such papers are deposited in various places.

URGES CORN GROWERS TO HAVE PATIENCE

ALLEN B. WEST ENCOURAGES YOUTHS ENTERED IN CORN GROWING CONTEST.

PLENTY OF TIME AHEAD

A Few Days Will Do Lots Toward Aiding Growth—Tells of Cultivation of Corn.

(By Allen B. West.)

There are now an even hundred boys registered for the acre corn growing contest that is the most important point in the corn raising season. Corn is late this year but, don't become discouraged boys. If your corn is late owing to weather conditions, the chances are that the other boys are late also. At any rate, there's a lot of time yet for corn to grow. With all the moisture that the soil is absorbing these rainy days, a few warm days will send it right on. It will send the weeds on too, and this leads most naturally to the subject of cultivation of corn. Deep and thorough cultivation is the order with some farmers, but experiments have shown that this is not the way to get the largest yield. Corn is a shallow rooted plant and even shallow cultivation cuts off some of the corn roots and as these roots are the feeders of the plants, destruction of any of them lessens the yield of corn. This shows the importance of cultivation of the ground beneath the corn. But boys growing corn in the acre contest cannot at this stage be profited by advice to cultivate before corn is planted. What to do now is the thing that counts. It is generally good practice to use the smoothing or common harrow immediately after planting. Or, if a heavy rain has compacted the soil and formed a crust, the harrow may be used following the planter marks.

But most of the corn is well up by this time and several inches high. How shall it be cultivated? After it is well up, the harrow should not be practiced. This is important if a large yield is desired. More emphasis should be put on the matter of clean cultivation. Experiments have shown that the cultivation is more important than the soil mulch to conserve moisture, on which stress has been placed in the past.

The Illinois and Ohio experiment stations have both been working on the problem of corn cultivation. Those of Illinois are reported in the Breeders' Gazette as follows:

Three plots of ground were selected in 1907 for the experiment and the investigations have continued through eight years. All three plots were plowed, the seed bed was prepared and corn planted in the usual way. Nothing was done but to let the weeds grow without disturbance. Plot 2 received no cultivation except to keep the weeds down by scraping with a sharp hoe, the surface being disturbed as little as possible. Plot 3 received ordinary good cultivation with a shovel cultivator to keep the ground loose and free of weeds.

The results were surprising. Plot 1 produced on an average for the 8 crops only 5 and 3-10 bushels of corn per acre. This shows what robbers the weeds are of both food and moisture.

Plot 2 produced 47 and 3-10 bushels per acre, exactly 32 more bushels per acre than Plot No. 1, though the ground was not cultivated at all, only the weeds scraped off.

Plot No. 3 produced on the average 42 and 9-10 bushels, which it will be noted, is 4 and 6-10 bushels less per acre than the plot that was not cultivated at all, only the weeds scraped off.

This plot No. 3 out-yielded the cultivated plot nearly every year and especially so in two very dry years. The reason for this is in the character of the corn plant. The roots living near the surface, bring to the plant both food and moisture. If any are cut the plant is deprived of food and the yield is lessened. The lesson taught by this experiment is that of the necessity of not allowing the weeds to get a start. If they get a start it is impossible to get rid of them without destroying corn roots. So, boys, get busy right away if you want a good yield. If your corn is more than six inches high, be very careful about the weeds. Clean them out thoroughly and a half to two inches will be quite enough. If it is just up, a deeper cultivation may be given to destroy the weeds. The main thing is to destroy weeds and after the corn is six inches high, this should be done with as little disturbing of the surface soil as possible. It is to be hoped that the boys in the acre contest will make a clean sweep of their corn. Don't let a weed grow.

When the weeds of the corn fill the upper portion of the soil, they catch moisture and pass upward so that not so much is left as would be the case with plants whose roots were not so near the surface, so the soil mulch seems to be of less importance than heretofore on the weeds.

Question—Many hills of corn in my field are missing and that which has come up is yellow. What do you advise?

Answer—Replant the missing hills at once with the best seed obtainable. As to the color of that which is up, it is no doubt owing to the wet, cold weather. A few warm, sunny days will probably bring it to better color.

Question—What shall I do for my rose bushes? The leaves are becoming skeletonized by a green insect on the under side of the leaf.

Answer—Kerosene emulsion made as follows and used in a fine spray, being careful to reach the underside of the leaves. The emulsion is made by dissolving 1 ounce of any good soap in 1 cup of boiling hot water. Add 1 cup of kerosene and beat with a cover egg beater until the mixture is a creamy mass of twice its original bulk. Add 2 quarts of water and use as a spray.

A 50 per cent solution of arsenate of potassium may be used instead of the kerosene emulsion. The arsenate is to be used as a poison for biting insects and emulsion for sucking insects. The rose slug partakes of the nature of both.

Question—The leaves of my currant bushes are turning red and on the underside are little green insects. What is the remedy?

Answer—The insects are aphids, or plant lice. Kerosene emulsion, in spray, is the remedy, and care should be used to direct it to the underside of the leaves. Use the same proportion for the kerosene emulsion, but larger quantities, for instance, one quart kerosene, 1 pint water, 1 ounce soap diluted in 17 parts of water, make a 10 per cent solution which is about right for rose bushes.

WELCOMES SUNSHINE HERE WITH SUMMER

Old Sol Beams Brightly as He Reaches Most Northern Point in His Eccentric This Morning.

Summer arrived at 7:22 this morning and quite to the surprise of every one. Old Sol, beaming his brightest, at the same moment there was a brisk breeze blowing from the northwest which is indicative, according to the weather-wise, that the prevailing wind of the summer season will be from that direction.

In addition to marking the arrival of summer today was the longest day of the year, the date upon which the sun's rays reach their longest point in the ecliptic. The sun rose at 4:23 and will disappear below the western horizon at 7:49 this evening, which makes a total of 15 hours, 26 minutes of sun light, which means something more than sixteen hours of daylight.

Wednesday and Thursday will be practically of the same length as today, the days will begin to grow shorter.

With the advent of summer this year city residents as well as farmers, but especially the latter, are looking forward to a more liberal supply of sunshine that has been enjoyed during the spring months. It really behooves the weather man to boost the stock above par if he intends to get a corner on the market of real June weather.

The weather bureau complains that the elements have been guilty of such vagaries that it is well nigh impossible to tell what is going to happen for tonight and tomorrow. A storm is said to be forming in the Rocky mountain region and heading in this direction but the weather man predicts fair weather for tonight without much change in temperature.

ASK LOCAL OFFICIALS TO APPREHEND MAN WITH GINSING.

In a letter to Postmaster J. J. Cunningham today Jefferson county officials asked him to inform local druggists and the police department to be on the lookout for a middle aged man who rubbed a ginseng garden at that place. It is charged that the man was a "snag hunter" who on two occasions previous, two and four years ago respectively, had committed similar offenses in the same garden. The man, it is charged, consisted of a bushel and a half of ginseng roots and a half of ginseng leaves. The man was seen by a local resident who reported the matter to the police.

This afternoon Mr. Leak took some of the boys out on a long hike through the country. These hikes are to be frequent this summer and give the boys a good chance to get out and take real bracing exercise.

The Commercial League managers met last night in their regular weekly meeting and two important matters were given attention. It was decided that there would be no fifth team unless some company volunteered soon to participate in the national pastime. The telephone companies have decided that they will not be able to let the men off at the proper times, so gave up the idea of a team. It was also decided to appoint a committee to see that the crowd was kept under control at the games each Saturday afternoon and make it possible for ladies as well as other fans to attend and enjoy the games. The managers took action on both of these matters and the matter was decided with approval.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Monroe, Wis., June 22.—John W. Stewart, poet laureate and county clerk of Green county, has bowed to the little god of love and was united in marriage to Mrs. Elsiebeth Kundert. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. C. Dixon, district superintendent of the Madison district of the Methodist church at Madison.

The most notable of his writings is a poem entitled, "Green County," which has enjoyed state-wide circulation, and which extolls the beauties and the productive power of the county, the richest agricultural section in the Badger state.

HORSES AND MULES GOING ABOARD SAYS TEXAS MAN

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Dallas, Texas, June 22.—The south and west in 1916 will face a horse and mule famine, in the opinion of T. J. Bullard of Waxahachie, veteran dealer in the result of Europe's war orders for these beasts.

Discussing the situation today, Bullard declared that between fifteen and twenty million dollars have been spent by the fighting Europeans in Texas for these mounts and beasts of burden. By the hundred, these animals have been sold here since last August, largely through Fort Worth market.

The United States government is the latest purchaser in Texas. The British are buying only the pick of the offerings, says Bullard.

As a result of this unprecedented demand, Bullard says that the United States will have practically no work and draft stock in a few more months. Oklahoma, Missouri and Georgia, he says, are cleaned out. Texas stock is rapidly being depleted.

CHIEF BENDER FINDS "FEDS" ROUGH GOING

Batsmen in Gilmore Loop Have Been Hammering Offerings of Indian to All Corners of Lot.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

New York June 22.—Chief Bender is finding the going decidedly rough in the Federal league. The batsmen in the Gilmore loop have been hammering the offerings of the Indian twirler all over the lot all season. So far he has been of but little assistance to the Baltimore club.

There were great many who shook their heads negatively when Connie Mack handed his once star finger the go-by. They believed the Tail One had pulled a boner. The Indian was believed to be good for several years in the Big Show. Subsequent events have made this seem doubtful.

Bender isn't the only former star who is finding his path a thorny one with the Reds. Hank Johnson isn't burning up the Third League. This youngster flashed across the horizon as a star with the Boston Red Sox a year ago. By beating the famous Walter Johnson a couple of times he achieved considerable fame. The Reds tempted him and he hopped to their circuit, joining Joe Tinker's Chicago club. That about all he has done for them. He has won few games this season.

Old Doc Crandall wins a few games for the St. Louis Reds. He is not being worked in the box very hard, however. Hugh Bennett, another former Red Sox artist, who was rated high in the American league, is having a rough voyage with the Buffalo Bisons. His percentage is below .500. Cy Falkenberg, formerly of Cleveland, Chief Johnson, the Indian, formerly with the Reds and Russ Ford, an ex-Yankee are some others who are doing little more than breaking even in games won and lost in the Third League.

On the other hand there are some former stars from the Big Show who are breezing through the Federal league with ease. There are some others who never achieved much fame before appearing in the Gilmore loop who also are winning games with monotonous regularity.

Eddie Plank, the Gettysburg veteran who chucked many a winning game for the Athletics, is one of the big league stars who continues to cop in the Third League. He is the mainstay of Fielder Jones' Mount City crew in the chase for the flag. He ranks among the league's first five winning twirlers.

Allen of Pittsburgh, who formerly wore a Brooklyn National uniform, is another star hurler in the Gilmore camp. He has pitched a wonderful brand of ball all year.

Others who are zipping along the right side of the league are Nick Culp, with Kansas City, formerly of Cleveland. Suggs of Baltimore, once a Cincinnati Red; Bob Groom of St. Louis; Earl Mosely, of Newark, from the Boston Red Sox and Tom Seaton, Brooklyn star, formerly with the Phillies.

ROESLING TEAM TRIUMPHS OVER NEW RED SOX NINE

By a score of 7 to 3, the Roessling baseball club triumphed over the new Red Sox team Sunday morning at the Hohenadel Canning factory diamond. Berter hurled his usual good game, holding his opponents at his mercy. His former feat was by holding the Delivery team hitless and winning 3 to 0. The lineup of the game Sunday follows:

Roessling—Kakuska, ss; R. Berger, 1b; Fuleilton, 2b; Spohn, 3b; Manake, cf; Prox, rf; Bier, lf; G. Berger, p; Spohn, c.

Red Sox—Miller, cf; Swan, 1b; S. Hell, ss; Kerl, 3b; S. Smith, 2b; E. Hell, c; Bissell, 1b; Duller, rf; O. Smith, p.

BADGERS NOSE OUT WIN OVER MUTUALS SUNDAY

Through good pitching by Brown, and excellent support, the Badgers were able to trim the Mutuals on Sunday at baseball by a score of 11 to 10. A three-bagger by Timpany won the game for the Badgers. Brown and Cullen formed the winning battery, with McLoughland and Slosson performing for the losers.

One thing no catcher ever tries, or thinks of trying nowadays, "The take" passed ball. Long ago, with a man on third, it was quite a uoper for the catcher, safely tucking the ball into the big glove, to wheel about and make a mad gallop toward the stand, while the pitcher surged in as if to make a despairing effort to ston the runner at the plate. Even the keenest of coaches fell for that one, and many a runner was sent in, only to have the catcher, with a hoarse ruffian, stop a few feet south of the plate, step back and receive the victim as he arrived. Tricks like that are never seen nowadays—and why?

The present race in the American league is pretty sure to continue one of the most interesting in the history of the league. There are more contenders this year than there have ever been, and there is a good chance of these closing up on one another and making a hot fight near the finish. Nothing will help to revive real interest in the game like an interest fight for each of the major league pennants.

PICKERING, AT 41, BEATS KID STARS

Ollie Pickering.

Ollie Pickering, who was a member of the Cleveland Naps a decade ago, is probably the oldest ball player of prominence in the game today. In the training camp this spring he showed enough speed, batting ability and power of arm to induce the Winnipeg (Manitoba) management to sign him. Although nearly forty-one, Pickering was selected in preference to several young stars.

MORRIS MILLER

The cancellation of the English Derby brings home to sport followers the world around the blighting effects of the European war on sporting events of all types. Although the Oxford-Cambridge boat race and the track meet, the English Henley Wimbledon tennis and the golf championships for 1915 were all abandoned, it was thought that the Derby would be held as usual. Even though a substitute race be held, there now exists a break in the chain of Derby races, which extended over a period of more than 100 years.

Yale is becoming very much of a fault finder. In the old days the Elis never complained of anything. Perhaps it is because the other colleges have picked on Yale so of late years. Yale came back in rowing but not in other sports.

The St. Louis American league team has a most remarkable collection, the smallest member of the staff, and he stands 5 feet 11 1/4 inches. The largest man in the squad is Carl Veilman, with 6 feet 6 1/2 inches. Grover Lowdermilk is next, and is just a trifle shy of 6 feet 6 inches. Bill James is over 6 feet 4 inches; Perryman is a fraction shy of the same mark, while Hoch is close to the 6 foot 2 inch mark.

Pat Nelson wants to box Freddie Welsh for nothing. Maybe Tris Speaker will turn over what he doesn't need for a home for crippled bathys, or Eugene Stallings sign a handsome check to build a tomb for Connie Mack.

Connie Mack boasts of having the two oldest coaches in the game. When Harry Davis and Nip Lajoie are out on the coaching line, the combined ages of Mack's coaches is well over the eighty mark.

In Topeka, Kansas, there's a groceryman who has a private telephone from his store to his box at the ball park and transacts his business while he watches the game. He doesn't class with Congressman Jim Gallivan, who communicates with Washington by wireless while rooting for the Red Sox.

Louis Malone is now putting up such a great game at second for the Athletics that Connie Mack is thinking of keeping Lajoie out of the game as a regular and using the King only as a pinch hitter. If Malone continues his hitting, Philadelphia fans vow that Malone is the best looking kid picked up by Mack since Eddie Collins broke in.

Dinner Stories

David Belasco, the famous playwright and theatrical manager, was a newspaper reporter for some time. While so employed he put in a few days with a gang of tramps in order to get "color" for an article he had been assigned to write. He found them a merry lot, with as many stories as the man of a minstrel show, says the Rochester Times. One of them told in his hearing of having been given a mince pie by the young wife of a farmer. Next day the tramp appeared at the farm house again and said:

"Could you be kind enough, ma'am, to give me that recipe for that there

The soldier on leave from the front had been given a free railroad pass to take him home to see his people, and he utilized part of his brief holiday to get married. On the return journey, when the ticket inspector asked to see his pass, the soldier produced by accident his marriage license.

"The inspector handed the paper back with a glimmer of a smile. 'This is a ticket for a very long and wearisome journey, young man,' he said, 'but not on this line.'"

The consistently good work which Joe Wood is doing for the Red Sox makes that team's chances look much brighter than they did earlier in the campaign. Wood has recently pitched two brilliant games, one against the White Sox and the other against Cleveland. This seems to indicate that he has regained his old form and can now be relied upon to win a large majority of his games. Foster, another of the Sox pitchers, also is going well, and there are several other pitchers—Shore and Gregg, for instance—who are apt to come through.

THE GOOD JUDGE TRIES TO MAKE PEACE.

ALL argument stops when a man gets the taste of the Real Tobacco Chew. The taste and comfort it gives him tells him that the Real Tobacco Chew is right. Many men are telling their friends about the clean, small chew that satisfies.

A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough—cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.

THE REAL TOBACCO CHEW IS NOW CUT TWO WAYS!! W-B CUT IS LONG SHRED. RIGHT CUT IS SHORT SHRED.

Take less than one-quarter the old size chew. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just take a nibble of it until you find the strength chew that suits you, then see how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is the Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up. An excess of licorice and sweetening makes you spit too much. One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

“Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste.”

UP TO THE VOTERS.

This is the way the Milwaukee Sentinel places the caption over the editorial published this morning on the situation at Madison. The Sentinel says:

"There are certain ominous signs of the times to which the people of this state (those who pay taxes) should wake up."

"And having waked up, they should go busy."

"Anti-administration papers are (prematurely and maladroitness) would think) declaring that Governor Philipp faces a 'crisis' in the probable prospective defeat of his measures for economy, and chuckling in the pleasurable anticipation of the fiasco of his program to reduce the cost of government in this state to a reasonable figure."

"His predecessor, Mr. McGovern, whom La Follette charged with 'extraneous and sinful waste of the taxpayers' money during his two administrations, went out to Madison last week and delivered an address in praise of high taxes, denouncing as 'demagogues' those who 'pandered' to the 'fashionable hobby' of lower taxes."

"All ominous, one presumes, of danger to the governor's program of retrenchment."

"So it is time for the people to get busy in this matter. The legislature in the main means right, and will do right, if kept in heart and up to the mark by the people."

"But adroit and insidious influences are at work to balk the governor in the fulfillment of his specific contract with the taxpayers."

"He will need the active sympathy and support of the people who elected him to do certain things for them; and if he can not get the means to do these things from the legislature, the people will have elected him for nothing."

"And that will be largely their fault, if they fail to support him now."

"Of course, they are very busy with their own affairs, at this time of the year particularly. The growing crops need attention. The state of the weather is of engrossing interest."

"They feel that as they elect Mr. Philipp governor on a specific platform, they have a right to assume that their wishes will be carried out. That is representative government."

"Also, they have fled away their tax bills, and the first burst of indignation at the unconscionable increase is over. In view of the above signs of the times, we urge them to take out those tax bills, and refresh their memories, and their righteous indignation, and reflect on the danger that unless they impress it on Madison (that alive or pay roll drones and source of windy theories about the blessings of putting the screws on the citizen to the limit of his taxable capacity) they may wake too late to the painful fact that the tax-eater cohort of sleepless politicians and lobbyists have 'put it over on them' by chloroforming the measures which the government needs in order to carry out its contract to put this state on a basis of 'good government at a reasonable cost.'"

"The last state election may bear no fruit for them unless they insist and keep on insisting that the policies they voted for at the last election be translated into legislation."

"Let the voters remember that the politicians in peril of their jobs and their provender are at work in politics while they are asleep."

"Give the governor a show, and he will deliver the goods."

"Keep in touch with your representatives, and they will do the rest by acting representatively."

"It would be simply farcical and outrageous should our solons at Madison be juggled and honeyfugled and hornswoggled by these artful dodgers and Hungry Hunkies of politics in-to acting as if Blaine, and not Philipp, were elected governor."

"The voters ordered Philipp goods, and are entitled to delivery."

THE FRANK CASE.

Governor Slaton of Georgia has redeemed the fair reputation of his state by commencing the death sentence of Leo M. Frank, condemned murderer, to life imprisonment. Perhaps no case in the annals of the law has attracted such a nation-wide attention as this. Whether Frank was guilty or not, as long as there was a reason for a doubt, the action of Governor Slaton was right. The merits and demerits of the case have received much attention in the press of the country and the consensus of opinion of those who have been influenced by the published stories is that Frank may have been the victim of circumstances. Appeals containing thousands of names have been forwarded asking for clemency, and after careful consideration of the facts under discussion the governor commuted the sentence. He has taken the right stand and it is unfortunate that a mob composed of the persons who either through hatred for the nationality of the condemned, or through a pitch of frenzy by blatherskites, should attempt to show their disapproval of the act. No matter what the illiterate Georgia think or how they act, the people of the United States are behind the governor and his action.

VAN HISE SPOUTS.

It was a bit out of place for Charles Van Hise, president of the University of Wisconsin, to appear before the advertising men's convention in Chicago on Monday and exploit his Wisconsin idea and the doctrine that the standpatter promotes the growth of socialism. If socialism has any better friend in this country than the head of Wisconsin's million dollar experimental school at Madison, he would be hard to find. Van Hise, while announcing he was not a socialist, stated he believed that the present unjust distribution of wealth had much to do with the present conditions of unrest. This may be true, but why not start at home, Mr. President, and distribute some of the spoils you have accrued by private enterprises while accepting a salary as head of an educational institution? The taxpayers of Wisconsin want a man whose taxes paid out, and they are not getting it from the institution that Van Hise is head of. This is the real hub of the whole situation.

THE WEST VIRGINIA CASE.

One of the echoes of the civil war came up in the supreme court of the United States last week when the supreme court of the United States rendered on Monday a decision in the West Virginia debt case. An exchange, commenting upon it, says:

"The West Virginia debt case is in one sense half a century old, in another only nine years. In the first Constitution adopted by the state of West Virginia, it was provided that the new state should assume its proper share of the debt of the old state of Virginia of which it had been a part; but afterwards the claim was set up that, owing to one consideration and another, no part of the debt was properly due by West Virginia. After many years of jangling over the matter, Virginia in 1906 brought suit against West Virginia in the supreme court of the United States, and the decision on Monday was the final outcome. Much of the controversy turned on the question of interest, the principal having been allotted according to the relative wealth of the two sections of the old state. West Virginia denied her liability for any interest, and the supreme court decision included at the rate of 4 per cent from 1861 to 1891, 5 per cent from 1891 to the present time, and 5 per cent henceforward until the debt is paid. Only simple interest is allowed, as usual in such matters."

PHILIPP'S ADMINISTRATION TODAY OPENS CRUISE ON GENERAL REDUCTION OF STATE EXPENSE.

FINANCIAL MATTERS UP

Bills Have Been Drawn in Accord to Direct Wish of People.—Governor Has Done His Part. (By a staff correspondent.)

Madison, Wis., June 22.—The most important week to the taxpayers of Wisconsin who elected the Philipp administration began this morning. After six months of the hardest work ever done by a governor to carry out his election promises, the stage is set in the Wisconsin senate for the important acts of the 1915 legislature. The bill of consolidation, drawn after careful study to meet the planks of the Philipp platform, all have been passed by the assembly. Today comes direct from the people. There are no artificial differences of opinion and the bills have been amended to as nearly meet the situation as possible, and the relief promised the people is now up to the senate.

Governor Philipp Has Done His Part. In a message which he sent to the legislature this morning he added his own contribution to the consolidation bill, all designed to reduce the expenses and place the business of the state back upon a business basis. No governor ever has followed his promise so faithfully as the governor who did not get what they demanded during the campaigns of 1914, he will not be to blame.

The senate will be called upon to act on the bill of consolidation measures on Wednesday, the public welfare bill, the bill to reorganize the board of agriculture and the conservation bill. Two of these were considered by the senate this morning as a committee of the whole last week, and went to Wednesday's calendar without opposition. All of them are the work of the special investigating committee and each does its part in correlating the business of the state and getting rid of useless expenditures. The bills were drawn after the work of the commission was studied and testimony had been taken from heads of these bodies and their subordinates. The initial effort was to group the activities of the state government in departments, and in the past, through the growth of the commission form of government the work of many departments has been duplicated until the board of health, for instance, has been doing work belonging to another department, and, in turn, this department has been doing work which the board should be doing.

There has been no exception to this rule and the consequence has been that there has been much useless duplication.

From the beginning Governor Philipp has been handicapped by natural conditions and in many cases self-motives. No one has realized this more than he, but he has steadfastly remained at his task, working hours which have astonished his friends and have awakened the admiration of his bitterest opponents. It is characteristic, perhaps, but none the less true of the governor that he has tried to make good his promises to the people, even to the most minute detail. No word spoken during the many speeches which he made during primary and election campaigns has been forgotten. The talks he made at the crossroad grocery store have been as important to him as the most finished address of the campaign. As an example, Governor Philipp has received more callers than any other governor in recent years. Those around him have wondered at times if the doors of his private work room have not been open too much. He was asked this one day when work was piling up and it was evident that if he saw all of his callers and transacted urgent official business, he would go without lunch and be late for the meal to follow. His answer was that he had asked the people to come and see him and he had to make good.

It is in this manner that the governor has given his time to carrying out his promises and with six months of this kind of service behind him, he now awaits the action of the senate, which can defeat the wishes of the people or carry out the demands as expressed in every political meeting of the last year.

To the assembly, which, by the way, was elected with the governor from small communities and came here to carry out the wishes of the people, belongs great credit. To the assembly, except a small group of anti-administration men which tried to block every move, have forgotten partisan lines and factual differences and tried to study the needs of their constituents and act accordingly. Many of the members who have voted with the governor have been democrats who are pillars of strength to their party in their own right. They have declared that their platform did not differ greatly from that of the governor, that they came to Madison to do away with useless commissions and boards and cut down taxes, and they have asked no personal credit in supporting the bills suggested by the governor when they agreed they were right. No effort has been spared, meanwhile, by the opponents of the governor, to defeat his plans. Those democrats who have refused to be led away by promises of political favors or appeals to partisan prejudice, have been the subjects of bitter attacks in newspapers, whose only motive was defeat of the administration. No degree of fairness has been allowed to interfere with this campaign of vilification. Coupled with this has been the natural antagonism of the state employes, who has imagined that his job was at stake. While the governor has never intimated that he would interfere with the actual working forces of the several departments, the lesser employes have been enlisted in an army which has borne aloft the banner of misrepresentation and has been the fight in the country of the trusts from which they came. The members of the assembly have been deluged with letters, inspired by capitalist sources until it has been a wonder that they have remained in the fulfillment of their campaign pledges. That they have is shown by the fact that the measures promising relief have all been passed.

Assemblyman E. A. Everett, who has been a recognized legislative leader, pictured the situation plainly the other day in a speech demanding the passing of one of the administration bills.

"You must not forget," he said, "that this is not a one man proposition. It is not all Governor Philipp."

If Your Hair is Falling Out we know of no better remedy than

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic

A preparation which we gladly recommend to you. 50c. a bottle.

Smith's Pharmacy.

We came here, every man of us, with promises on our lips and we left behind us the belief that we would not forget those promises. We are as much concerned as is the governor in carrying out the pledges of 1914. Whatever the future has in store, I am glad to say that the assembly has for once, at least, been true to the people that elected it.

And he was right. The assembly has done its part, Governor Philipp has carried out his promises, and it rests with the senate. As a last argument, the opposition is announcing now that the administration has been routed and that the bills favored by the governor will go down to certain defeat in the senate. To those who have watched the situation, however, that argument is not accepted. They are confident that the senate will stand as a scaffold for the relief so much needed by the taxpayers as have the other men sent here to Madison at the November election.

FOUR ARRESTS MADE OF DOG OWNERS FOR ORDINANCE OFFENSE

Three Pay Fines of $7.50 For Not Purchasing Dog Licenses—More Arrests Expected.

The police department thoroughly demonstrated that they meant business in the enforcement of the ordinance requiring the licensing of all dogs, within the city limits, for this morning the three paid fines amounting to $7.50 for violating the ordinance in not purchasing tags and the fourth, George McLean, had his trial set for Friday.

For the past week a patrolman has been detailed to make a house to house canvass serving notices on dog owners to purchase tags within 24 hours. A careful patrolman is checked daily with the reports made by the City clerk on the number of dogs within the city limits. The patrolman went to the residence of George Miller, on Eastern avenue, and gave instruction such as was given every other dog owner. Miller, however, would not buy the tag and it is said when told to appear in court in answer to a complaint charging the ordinance violation "that he was too busy." The fact was reported to Chief Champion who saw that Miller was arrested this morning and lodged in the city hall police station until court time.

Paul Blumh and John Lawrence were told to appear in court as the twenty-four hour grace had expired and this morning, the patrolman with George McLean, Calena street, were brought before the municipal court with a warrant charging that they had a dog in their possession which was not licensed. The keeping of the dog was in violation of the city ordinance number 20. Paul Blumh, plead guilty and explained that he had the dog and the police might have him. City Attorney Dougherty and Chief Champion made haste to make it clear that the dog did not wish the canine. The five dollar fine under the ordinance which was paid. John Lawrence, plead guilty and explained that he had attempted to "get rid of the cur" but he could neither give or sell the animal, and did not have the heart to kill it. He also paid the fine.

When Miller was brought before the magistrate he meekly plead guilty and the same time as the others. When the case came to the fine, they made inquiries where to obtain the dog tags from the court clerk.

McLean appeared in court and for an hour the room was a scene of discussion and arguments which came near being a riot. McLean made no denial that he had a dog which did not have a license but argued that he had attempted to obey before court hour to comply with the law. The court ruled this was an abuse of the law and for order when McLean started caustic remarks about having to pay a fine because the tag license amount. McLean was not willing to plead guilty as went so far as to ask "If I plead guilty it will cost me $7.50 and if not guilty it will cost me nothing."

When the court explained that a trial would be necessary, the defendant held off his decision until the magistrate entered a plea of not guilty and set the case for Friday, June 25th. The cases in the municipal court were somewhat of a surprise for it was thought by the police department that at least two of the men arraigned this morning would attempt to question the legality of the ordinance.

Unless tags are purchased today by other dog owners who had notices served on them, more warrants will be obtained by the City Attorney as the ordinance requires that a dog owner will be enforced down to a letter this year. Besides having to pay the fine, which cannot be less than five dollars, those who are brought into court will have to purchase tags with in limited time for each day. The ordinance is a separate violation under the ordinance. This morning twenty more tags were sold making the total number purchased this year, 326. Be it declared that the dogs have been shot since June first and that this week the police department will make a small charge for the killing and burying of the animals to defray expenses of burying them.

SHIPS STRAWBERRIES TO NORTHERN CITIES

Marcus S. Kellogg of the Kellogg Nursery is busy these days handling strawberries and making the demands of northern cities of the central states. Every day lately, and perhaps until the end of the strawberry season, he will be kept busy shipping and sending shipments. Only yesterday, he shipped a carload of strawberries to Duluth, and other cities with over one hundred cases of the berries.

The reason as to why the northern cities are asking for Janesville berries is clear. Although the growing in central Wisconsin are about double in price per case. Because of the increased supply of these berries in Janesville and vicinity this year, the prices are constantly being filed here at about one-half the price central state growers are asking.

ASKS FOR PASSAGE OF CONSOLIDATION OF BILLS NOW PENDING

ious offices in the Capitol building and there is no systematic care of same. Some of the bills in the Capitol building should be made a repository for all documents of that character. Suitable vaults should be provided for their safe-keeping and proper records should be kept. I recommend that you enact such legislation as may be necessary to comply with this requirement.

There is a strong sentiment among the people of this state that the state shall curtail public expenditures with a view of lessening the burden of taxation. This sentiment was given full expression at the polls last fall when the people of this state have elected to elect to a public office of importance who made it known that he was unwilling to comply with this demand. The people understand that substantial economies in our state government cannot be brought about unless there be a curtailment of expenditures in all of our public institutions. One of the economies that is being urged and which I fully endorse is the abolition of all useless commissions and the consolidation of those that are retained in order that we may prevent duplication of service and produce greater efficiency in the administration. Early in the session the legislature appointed a committee of investigation for the purpose of studying the various state activities and the economies that could be made on more economical basis. Three consolidated boards were agreed upon by the committee of investigation and I recommend them to you for your favorable consideration.

The board of conservation embraces the fish commission, the fish and game protection department, the forestry board and the board of state parks. These four state activities naturally belong together and can be operated by a single board consisting of three men with much better results and at a greatly reduced cost.

The new agricultural board recommended by the committee, consisting of the present board of agriculture, the live stock sanitary board, the veterinarian, the immigration commission and the state inspector on agriculture, properly merge all these agricultural activities under a single board consisting of three commissioners. I recommend this consolidation to you in the interest of economy and greater efficiency. Although the state is at this time in a financial straits it is an agricultural board in name only. It has devoted its time to the promotion of the annual state fair and practically to no other agricultural activity. It is proposed to make a connection that the members serve without pay and we should be grateful to them for whatever service they have rendered. However, the great work of the agricultural board should not be without an agricultural board that devotes all of its time to the development of our agricultural interests. Much profitable work can be done by the way of increasing our production by inducing and promoting improved methods of farming as well as improving our live stock and our dairy products. These are subjects that deserve the attention of the state. There is a demand to the demand for a lower cost of living except the increased production of our farms.

In order that the work of inspection carried on by the state may be better organized and directed, this activity may be carried on in a more economical and businesslike manner, the committee of investigation reported a bill which creates a board of health and a board of public health. The board of public health, the board of control and the live stock sanitary board. These boards will employ a large number of inspectors. Each of these boards will have a separate budget and will be subject to the requirements of the other. There is probably little that the inspector could not do where often there is a duplication of service. Such a system is wasteful and, like all other overworked organizations, the man employed soon becomes inefficient.

A statement has been industriously circulated that the proposed law will associate the work of the board of health with departments with which it has nothing in common and that the efficiency of the health department will be impaired. Such statements are unwarranted. Such statements are unwarranted and do not understand the purpose of the proposed law or are actuated by selfish motives.

Men who have made a study of state government will freely admit that the work of the board of health and the state board of health should have been joined years ago. Men who are competent to supervise health and sanitation are well equipped to act as inspectors of the state institutions. Such work as plumbing inspection, which is now in charge of the state board of health and which must necessarily be carried on by a plumber rather than a doctor, should be placed in charge of the state board of health. There is much duplication in the inspection service of these departments. To have the health department inspect slaughter houses, the dairy and food department inspect meat markets, the weights and measures department inspect the same market, while the oil inspector may inspect the oil and gasoline used by the butcher, the hotel inspector may inspect the hotel, the same block, and it is altogether possible that all of these inspectors may arrive at the same place on the same day. It is for the purpose of avoiding such waste of the government's money that this proposed consolidation has been submitted to you and I recommend it for your favorable consideration.

The three bills that I have referred to the assembly and which are now pending in the assembly will, which transfers the duties of the fire marshal in part to the insurance commissioner and in part to the industrial commission and another bill reorganizes the state board of health in the interest of greater economy in the collection of our taxes are also pending. The consolidation bills that I have referred to give the governor the right to exercise some control over the expenditures of these institutions as the proposed law provides that whenever one of these departments proposes to increase its expenses it must have the authority of the governor to do so. The purpose of the consolidation is to bring these bureaus in closer touch with the people so that whenever the cost for operating the same becomes too large the people will know that the governor is responsible for the increased cost.

These consolidations have been made in response to a demand from the people for less commission and greater economy. It is the purpose of this administration to keep faith with the people. This is in the interests and I, therefore, recommend that you give favorable consideration to the propositions that I have herein referred to.

Respectfully submitted,

THROUGH MAJESTIC SCENERY TO CALIFORNIA.

Nowhere will be found such a continuous panorama of stupendous mountain scenery as is presented successively by the towering mountain ranges along the coast northern route of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway to the Pacific North Coast. From the time the train plunges into the American Rockies in Montana until it tunnels the snow-crowned heights of the Cascades in Washington, it is a trip of grandeur through a natural part of stupendous mountains, vast forests, beautiful water-falls, mysterious canyons and lands glowing with grain and green with orchards.

If desired you can break the journey at Butte and make a side trip to the wonderland of Yellowstone.

Another diversion is to detain at St. Maries, Idaho, and take the "Trip of Shadows," a forty mile boat trip down the picturesque "Shadow" St. Joe River and Lake Coeur d'Alene to Spokane where the journey over the "Hillway" is again resumed. This is an exclusive feature of this route, and can be taken without extra cost. Over this route there is operated daily two superb all-steel trains "The Olympian" and "The Columbian."

From Seattle and Tacoma you can journey to California over the scenic "Rainier-Shasta" Route and return home direct from either Los Angeles or San Francisco on the steel-equipped "Pacific Limited" over the central route of this company. By making this "Grand Circle Tour" you will see the principal show places and the most of the wonderful resources of the great west at a moderate cost.

"SNOBS" PROVED A CLEVER PLAY

"Snobs," a Jesse Lasky production, which was presented at the Apollo yesterday on the Paramount program, is a clever comedy, and more, it is a keen satire on modern society, or at least a portion of it. Victor Moore, the milkman hero of the story, who later discovers that he is a duke, is funny but likable, and the wealthy members of society who laugh upon him while sneering behind his back, are also funny but not nearly so likable. It remains for a girl who really loves him to disillusionize him.

In addition to this photoplay the large audiences very much appreciated the playing of Henry H. Busse, violinist with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, who has been secured for a short engagement at the Apollo. Mr. Busse promises a wide range of musical programs. Mrs. Ed. Thurston, formerly Miss Strumpe, presided at the piano in the absence of the regular pianist who is ill.

MADAME LACOUR TO LECTURE HERE

Authority on Scientific Corseting To Be at Golden Eagle All Week—Will Give Special Lecture Tomorrow.

Madame Georgie de Lacour, who has been lecturing before women's clubs of the country on hygienic and scientific corseting will give a lecture tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in the Golden Eagle saloon, New York City.

Incidentally the first surgical fitting department in connection with corsetry in the United States, outside of New York, was established by Madame de Lacour in Denver, Colorado, and she has the endorsement of 100 surgeons of that state.

One of Madame de Lacour's theories in which she has already succeeded in interesting a number of women's clubs is that proper corsetry should pass an examination by a state examining board. This is considered of great importance, since, as Madame Lacour states, improper corseting is often the cause of headaches and nervous troubles.

Notwithstanding that she is recognized as an authority both by medical men and by women of fashion, Madame Lacour is a woman of graceful, slender figure, a wealth of golden hair that is wonderfully fine in texture and she has the unusual beauty of refined features and intelligence and charm.

Of the corsets regarding which she will lecture tomorrow, she says: "Madame Irene makes the only corset that controls the abdomen without pressure, and the first pair of corsets of fitting the corset carefully to the spine at the waist line at the back. The corset keeps the spine in its correct position and in consequence the abdomen must remain in place."

"Madame Irene is a French woman and was engaged in designing corsets in Paris. She came to America in 1890 and the first pair of corsets she designed here was made on a foot power machine. Last year she did nearly a $3,000,000 business, and that, too, on the merits of the corsets alone, without the employment of demonstrators."

"Now, too, her shop is considered one of the most exclusive corset shops in America and among her clientele are many of New York's most fashionable and wealthy women."

Madame Lacour will be at the Corset Department of The Golden Eagle all this week.

HOW A MOTHER WAS REPAID.

The other day I read in a magazine the story of a girl who made a religion of the philosophy that one has a right and a duty to develop one's soul. She spent her father's money for expensive flowers while her mother wore shabby clothes, and did all sorts of things equally unthinkable.

No girl would be allowed to be as selfish as that. "I think all made up, I thought. A few hours later the postman brought me a letter, and after I had read it I knew I had judged the magazine article too hastily. For, if the letter was true (and it plainly was), the article might easily be.

No, the letter wasn't about another girl who fed her soul at the expense of her father's money. But it was an unthinkable in its way.

Washes, Sews, and Cooks for her. "I take care of the little ones," she wrote. "I wash, sew, and cook for them all and for three men who help my husband to do the work about the place. I have spent every cent I could get for them to give them a good education and a good start."

Now what do they do in return for all this? Well, here are a few of the things they do: They tell her that she doesn't know how to cook (because she hasn't time to make fancy cookies and cake).

They laugh at her, before outsiders, when she makes mistakes in grammar.

They make fun of her friends if she brings them to the house.

They tell her how she begins to look.

They laugh at her when she begins to sing in church.

They say that her hands are a fright and ask her when she last manicured them.

They would her when she forgets.

These are just a few—not by any means all—of the ways that these children find to repay a mother for going down into the valley of the shadow of death and for devoting every moment and every thought of her life to them.

But to me the most pathetic sentence of all was this: "When I am in the next room I can sometimes hear them talking of things I would love to have them tell me, or say in my presence, of the events of the day, the progress they are making in their work and things like that."

If your child asks for bread, will you give him a stone?

No, parents aren't like that. But if the mother asks her child for bread she may easily get a stone.

My blood fairly boils when I read that letter and yet, indignant as I am, I pity those children almost more than the mother. For think what they are going to feel when they're killed that patient, long-suffering mother and they see her lying there white and still with the work-worn hands they made fun of crossed on her breast. And then, when they know that she can't hear the kind things they want to say nor see the pretty things they want to give her, the remorse they want to express to her will cut through their hearts like a knife and they'll give half a life to bring her back long enough to tell her, and they can't.

Oh, folks with mothers, you wouldn't do such terrible things as these I know; but if you don't want to feel like this look out for even the lesser slights, the minor selfishness, the little thoughtlessness.

Household Hints

CANNING AND PRESERVING.

Rhubarb Marmalade—Peel rhubarb, cut it into small square pieces not larger than dice; when cut put into a vessel and cover with sugar in the following proportions: One and one-half pounds sugar to two pounds rhubarb; to every pound of rhubarb must be added the rind of a lemon cut fine. Let rhubarb, sugar and lemon peel stand all night; in the morning strain off liquid, boil three-quarters hour, then put in rhubarb and boil from twenty minutes to one-half hour, according to consistency it attains; the longer it is boiled the thicker it becomes.

Rhubarb Candy. With Sugar—Wash rhubarb that is tender, but do not peel it, as the pink skin makes the candied fruit a lovely color. Cut into inch pieces and measure. For every three quarts of sliced rhubarb allow three cups sugar and one cup water. Dissolve sugar, add water and slimmer gently fifteen minutes. Have ready sterilized jars with new rubbers and straighten top fit to overflowing with the boiling fruit, and screw as tightly as possible. After several hours, when cool, the top can be screwed tighter. A few raisins can be added when put on to cook.

Rhubarb and Orange Marmalade—Cut into inch pieces two pounds (ten dozen) oranges and cut yellow rind into shreds. Put orange pulp shredded and rhubarb into granite kettle with one and one-half pounds granulated sugar; place over a gentle fire, Cook, stirring often, until cool, then it may be covered with paraffin.

LAUNDRY SUGGESTION.

A handy apron for washday is made of ticking made medium with a piece sewed on the bottom turned up on the right, stitched at the sides and at intervals along the bottom. This makes a handy receptacle for cloths, pins and is handier than a bag of basket.

A more convenient way than to carry a basket when hanging out the clothes is to put in a small wagon and haul it. It also saves the wear on the bottom of the basket caused from dragging it on the ground.

To clean a clothesline that is soiled make into a coil and scrub well on the board, then boil in suds and rinse it as one does clothes, scrubbing it each time on the board. Stretch it as you would an ordinary line out doors to dry. If it needs cleansing in freezing weather, hang it by the stove, still coiled.

Clothes that are not well rinsed scorch much easier when ironed. If one is obliged to use hot water for rinsing use a little soft water to mix the bluing in, even if a little suds has to be used.

It is much easier to iron clothes if well shaken out when put on the line.

Overall, socks and quilts look much cleaner if hung out to drip in the shade—where the sun shines directly on them.

The male department of the domestic institution should do a good part of the family washing if there is no hired washwoman, and it should always be done on the premises, for the health and happiness of all.

Good, soft water, plenty of soap carefully dissolved, convenient and efficient heat, three metal tubs, a good wringer, commodious boiler all at hand and two to two and one-half hours will suffice to put all the soiled linen of the average home into an immaculate condition so far as cleanliness and whiteness can make it so.

Sort the linen. Put all fine and delicate fabrics in one tub; the next coarser, such as bath towels, hand towels, cotton underwear in another; dish towels in another.

Dissolve a cake of soap in boiling water.

Bring from the boil and put through the indigo line.

Wash flannels in warm suds strong enough to lather, and rinse in warm water. Dry them in warm place. They will not shrink, and always be soft.

Fill the boiler and when water is hot pour it over the linen in each tub until all is covered with hot suds. Allow to stand at least two hours over night, is better. A funnel vacuum washer will do good applied to the soak. Very little rubbing will suffice and that only on soiled spots. Put through the boil, bringing with the finer white fabrics.

A Solar Plexus. "Your apartment, sir," said the cynical flautist to the stupid janitor with a cold in his head, "is not at all what you advertise it to be, but, as for yourself, I cheerfully admit that you live up to the specifications, for you are the finest specimen of a large, rheumatic flat I have ever encountered."

Whereupon he sped out into the cold world, leaving the janitor a prey to morose reflections.

"Peace," said Uncle Eben, "consists largely in knowin' dat you's licked befo' you start or convincin' de other feller dat he is."

TIME FOR CANNING BOOSTS SUGAR UP; FLOUR PRICE DOWN

Nearly Eight Dollars Per Barrel Now —Strawberries Cheap—Bumper Wheat Crop, Flour Price Reduces.

The approach of the canning season is causing the annual rising in sugar to commence. On the Janesville market today that of the cane variety was bringing $8.75 per one hundred pounds. It will continue to rise, local grocers aver, until preserving time is past.

An influx of home-grown strawberries yesterday caused a material drop in this fruit. While some grocers were getting as much as 25 cents for three boxes, in other places they were retailing at $1.15 per case.

The fruit as a whole was fine, condition and flavor being excellent. Other berries are also running strong on the local market with demand good.

A bumper wheat crop, the greatest in the United States for years has proved a tendency for a drop in flour.

A drop of a dollar per barrel has come about in the past week. Locally the price has dropped 25 cents per sack. It has been stated that a further falling in price can be expected as the present wheat crop has exceeded by forty millions bushels, a close and conservative estimate by the federal bureau of the department of agriculture made two months ago.

Householders fortunate enough to be blessed with spacious yards which happen to have cherry trees will have a big picking of the early variety. Trees about the country are bending down under the strain of a big crop.

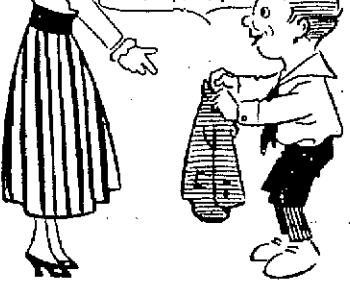

They are just in the latter stages of ripening and cherry pies should this week commence to grace the table of the housewife.

A peculiar status seems to prevail at the present time in the fact that early ripening salmon, now, just as they are half ripened, seem to be more sweeter than those picked at a corresponding time of turning in former years. Whether the abundance of rain has caused this is a matter of conjecture. Horticulturists say that the rain of the present summer and spring has been a tendency to make the strawberry taste flat.

In contrast with the big pickings contemplated from the cherry trees, those that bear at a latter date have but small crops.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Is it proper for a young man to be steady friends where the girls is three years older?

(2) What would you suggest as a present for a man forty-five for a young man when he takes her home?

BLONDE. (1) It is proper if he enjoys the company of a girl so matter of one of her favorite tobacco.

(2) Many girls think that boys are slow if they do not ask to kiss them good night, but some girls admire boys who do not ask for kisses until they are engaged. It is a matter of your own choice which kind of girl you want to please. But you will find that girls who are not willing to be pawed over by every man that comes along generally command the greater respect.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl almost eighteen years of age. About two years ago at an entertainment I met a young gentleman. We went together on the sly for a while and mother got hold of one of our letters at one time and refused to let me read it. I've seen him since then and told him not to write any more letters. He said he wouldn't and he kept his promise. He called me up a number of times and I hung up the receiver. One night a girl friend of mine and I were out walking and we went by his place. A young couple had just got married and there was a bunch of boys celebrating. I told him and he and one of his friends followed me. He asked me for a date and I said "Yes." Now my mother doesn't know that I am going. One of my girl friends is going along and he is going to bring one of his boy friends for her. Now, Mrs. Thompson, I do wish you would please give me some good advice along this line. She called him I won't go? I like him very well and would hate to do that. Or shall I go with him this time and ask him what he wrote that made my mother refuse to let me read it?

LITTLE MISS WORRIED. If the young man is worthy of your friendship, he will be willing to call upon your mother and try to win her consent to let you go with him. Write and ask him to do this, and in the same letter tell him that you will not be able to keep your date with him unless your mother consents to let you go.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been asked to go to the theater with a young man and my younger sister wants to go with us very badly. I

Glimpses of Married Life

By Mrs. Eva Leonard

When Dr. Ellison, Neil and Olive left the theater, the doctor said: "Let us go and get something to eat. What place do you suggest, Miss Dunn?"

"I am a stranger in these parts," said Olive.

"Here is a good place and it is not crowded," Olive indicated a brightly lighted restaurant, and they entered and found a table in a secluded corner.

"It is a good thing we got in when we did," said Olive after they had been served. "The place is filling up fast."

"I like to watch the crowd," it is so long since I was in a good restaurant," Neil was looking at the beautiful costumes in smiling enjoyment, when she started violently and her fork fell clattering to the floor.

The others noticed her agitation, and when the waiter had replaced the fork and moved away, Olive said: "What did you see?"

"Don't turn, but look in the mirror back of me. Mrs. Ellison is sitting at a table in the opposite corner; the woman alone at the table."

"How old she looks," said the doctor, a note of compassion in his voice. "She is only twenty-seven and she looks forty."

"The one resting her chin on her hand looking this way?" Olive was gazing into the mirror.

"That is she," replied the doctor. "You see that maid has told her of our coming east given her mother's address, everything. She is probably shadowing us. I can't believe it is an accident, her being here tonight. How far does her sister live from here?" Neil added, turning to the doctor.

"About one hundred and fifty miles," he replied.

"When they finally rose to go, Olive looked steadily at the woman as they went out the door."

"I know it was rude," she said, "but I had heard so much about her. She has thrust herself so persistently into my life behind a veil that I wanted to see what she looked like."

"How I would like to know if she is following us," said Neil, looking uneasily over her shoulder.

Olive gave her arm an admonitory punch. She realized that the whole affair was inexplicably painful to the doctor. Neil dropped the subject, but kept on the alert for any signs of the enemy.

Olive was to spend the night with Neil, and after the doctor had left them in the vestibule, Olive ran out on the steps and peered up and down the street. Neil followed to see what was afoot.

"Do you see that slender figure in black on the other side of the street? I believe it is Mrs. Ellison shadowing the doctor. Close the door and let us follow and find out where she goes."

"Shadowing?" "Come on," they laughed. "They are following us."

Neil, hysterically, "Come on," they went down the street keeping in sight of the figure in black. When the doctor turned into his hotel the shadowy figure stopped, looked about her, evidently to get her bearings, then passed on and turned down a side street. The girls followed nearer now, for fear of losing her at a sudden turning. She stopped at a modest lodging house, took out her pass key and let herself in. Olive wrote down the street and number; then the girls turned and hurried home.

"I'm going around there and inquire for her tomorrow, and if she's there, leave my card," said Olive. "Why?" asked Neil, astonished. "Just to let her know we have tracked her to her home," laughed the girl.

ALCOHOL COMMISSION DECLARES LIQUOR TRAFFIC SHOULD BE LIMITED

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Christiana, June 22.—An alcohol commission which was appointed by Parliament three years ago to investigate certain conditions and recommend reforms has just issued majority and minority reports. The commission consisted of nine members. The majority report, which is signed by six members, advises against the prohibition of the import and manufacture of brandy spirits, but would have the sale of spirits subjected to the same rigid laws which are now in force in Sweden, in accordance with what was known as the Bratske system. The sale of distilled liquors, according to this system, is subjected to the most rigid limitations. The majority report also favors the Swedish system for the sale of beer, according to which beer below 2 percent alcohol by weight is sold free of restrictions.

There are two minority reports. One is signed by two members and recommends prohibition by local vote.

SOLDIER IS RECOVERING HIS HEARING AND SPEECH LOST THROUGH EXPLOSION.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, June 22.—When he found that speech, which had been lost through concussion, had returned to him, Private Pointer of the London Rifles spent a whole night in the general hospital at Lincoln talking to himself. He feared to lose it if he did not keep it up, yet he did not want to call out to the night sister for fear she might faint. So he waited until the attendant came around with his morning cup of tea, then remarked: "Shove it down there, old chap." For this he was showered with the tea by the agitated attendant.

Pointer's case has been of intense interest in the hospital, as a case of loss of speech, taste and hearing, due to the explosion of a giant shell near him in the battle line. It now seems to be recovering his hearing also.

"You are certainly the friend in need, Griswold, if ever there was one," he said, gripping the hand of the leavetaking as if he would crack the bones in it. "But there is one thing I'm going to ask you, and you mustn't take offense—this ninety thousand; could you afford to lose it—or is it your whole stake in the game?"

Griswold's smile was the ironmaster's assurance that he had not been offended.

"It is practically my entire stake—and, I can very well afford to lose it in the way I have indicated. You may call that a paradox, if you like, but both halves of it are true."

"Then there is one other thing you ought to know, and I'm going to tell it now," Raymen went on. "We do a general foundry and machine business, but a good fifty per cent of our profit comes from the Wahaska and Pineboro railroad repair work, which we have had ever since the road was opened."

Griswold was smiling again. "Why should I know that particularly," he asked.

"Because it is rumored that Jasper Grierson has been quietly absorbing the stock and bonds of the road, and if he means to move me from the map—"

"I see," was the reply. "In that case you'll need a partner even worse than you do now. You can't scare me off that way. Shall I look for you at ten tomorrow?"

"At ten to the minute," said the rescued plunger; and he went downstairs so full of mingled thankfulness and triumph that he mistook Doctor Farnham's horse for his own at the hitching post two doors away, and was about to get into the doctor's buggy before he discovered his mistake.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Bridge of Jehennam.

Griswold took a final look at himself in his dressing case mirror before going to keep his evening appointment at the doctor's downtown office. It was comfortably reassuring. So far as he could determine, there was little in the clean-shaven, square-shouldered, correctly garmented young fellow who faced him in the mirror to suggest either the boarded-outcast of New Orleans or the unkempt and toll-sadden roustabout of the Belle Julie. If only she had not made him speak to her. He had a sharp conviction that the greatest of all the hazards lay in the chance that she might remember his voice.

He found the cheery little doctor waiting for him when he had walked the few squares to the Main street office.

"I was beginning to be afraid you were going to be fashionably late," said the potential host; and then, with a humorous glance for the correct garmenting: "Regalia, eh? Hasn't Miss Grierson told you that Wahaska is still hopelessly unable to live up to the dress coat and standing collar? I'm sure she must have. But never mind; climb into the buggy and we'll let old Bucephalus take us around to see if the neighbors have brought in anything good to eat."

The drive was a short one. Broffin was once more abiding the house to which, first or last, he expected to rap his amateur MacHeath; and when the buggy was halted at the carriage step he was near enough to mark and recognize the doctor's companion.

"Not this time," he muttered sourly, when the two had passed together up the gravelled path and the host was fitting his latchkey to the front door. "It's only the sick man that writes books. I wonder what sort of a book he thinks he's going to write in this inforgotten, turkey-trodden, come-along village of the Reuben yaps?"

Griswold, waiting on the porch while Doctor Farnham fitted his key, had a nerve-tingling shiver of apprehension when the latch yielded with a click and he found himself under the hall lantern formally shaking hands with the stately young woman of the many imaginations.

"You are very welcome to Home Nook, Mr. Griswold; we have been hearing about you for many weeks," she was saying when he had relinquished the firm hand and was hanging his coat and hat on the hall rack. And then, with a half-embarrassed laugh: "I am afraid we are dreadful gossip; all Wahaska has been talking about you, you know, and wondering how it came to acquire you."

"It hasn't acquired anything very valuable," was the guest's modest disclaimer, its readiness arising out of a grateful easing of strains now that the actual face-to-face ordeal had safely passed its introductory stage. "And you mustn't say a word against your charming little city, Miss Farnham," he went on. "It is the friendliest, most hospitable—"

The doctor's daughter was interrupting with an enthusiastic show of applause.

"Come out to dinner, both of you," she urged; and then to Griswold: "I want you to say all those nice things to Aunt Fanny."

In the progress to the cozy, home-like dining-room Griswold found the contrast between the Farnham home and the ornate mansion three streets away on the lake front strikingly apparent; as clearly marked as that between Margery Grierson and the sweetly serene and conventional young person who was introducing him to her aunt across the small oval dining table.

So far, all was going well. But a little later, in the midst of a half-uttered direction to the serving maid, Miss Farnham stopped abruptly, and Griswold could feel her gaze, wide-eyed and half-terrified, seemingly fixed upon him.

It was all over in the turning of a leaf; there had been no break in the doctor's genial ratiocality, and the breathless little pause at the other end of the table was only momentary. When the dinner was over the doctor, in the act of filling two long-stemmed pipes for his guest and himself, was called away professionally. Miss Gilman, least obtrusive of chaperons, had been peacefully napping for a good half-hour in her low rocker under the reading lamp, and the pictures in a thick quarto of Gulf Coast views had pleasantly filled the interval for the two who were awake, when Griswold finally assured himself that the danger of recognition was a danger past. As a mental analyst he knew that the opening of each fresh door in the house of present familiarity was automatically closing other doors opening upon the past; and it came to him with a little flush of the seer's exaltation that once again his prefigurings were finding their exact fulfillment. In a spirit of artistic daring he yielded to a sudden impulse, as one crossing the flimsiest of bridges may run and leap to prove that his theory of safety stresses is a sufficient guaranty of his own immunity.

"You were speaking of first impressions of places," he said, while they were still turning the leaves of the picture book. "Are you a believer in the absolute correctness of first impressions?"

"I don't know," was the thoughtful reply; but its afterword was more definite.

"I saw him twice," she insisted; "once while we were at dinner, and again just now. The first time I thought I might be mistaken, but this time—"

Griswold was laughing silently and inwardly deriding his gifts when, under cover of the doctor's return, he made decent acknowledgments for benefits bestowed and took his departure. On the pleasant summer-night walk to Upper Shawnee street he was congratulating himself upon the now quite complete fulfillment of the wishing prophecy. Miss Farnham was going to prove to be all that the most critical maker of studies from life could ask in a model; a supremely perfect original for the character of Fidelity in the book. Moreover, she would be his touchstone for the truths and verities; even as Margery Grierson might, if she were forgiving enough to let bygones be bygones, hold the mirror up to nature and the pure humanities. Moreover, again, whatever slight danger there might have been in a possibility of recognition was a danger outlived. If the first meeting had not stirred the sleeping

"Hello, Mr. Griswold; is that you?" called the cheery one, when he saw a bareheaded man beating the covers in his front yard.

Griswold met his host at the gate and walked up the path with him.

"Miss Charlotte thought she saw someone at one of the front windows," he explained; and a moment afterward the daughter was telling it for herself.

"I saw him twice," she insisted; "once while we were at dinner, and again just now. The first time I thought I might be mistaken, but this time—"

Moreover, again, whatever slight danger there might have been in a possibility of recognition was a danger outlived. If the first meeting had not stirred the sleeping

"How can you know that?" she asked; and again he saw in the expressive eyes the flying signals of indeterminate perplexity and apprehension.

Resolutely he pressed the hazardous experiment to its logical conclusion. Once for all, he must know if this young woman with the sympathetic voice and the goddesslike pose could, even under suggestion, be led to link up the past with the present.

"It is my trade to know," he said quietly, closing the book of views and laying it aside. "There have been moments in your life when you would have given much to be able to decide a question of duty or expediency, entirely irrespective of your impressions. Isn't that so?"

For one fitting instant he thought he had gone too far. In the hardy determination to win all or lose all, he had been holding her eyes steadily, as the sure mirror in which he should be able to read his sentence, of acquittal or condemnation. This time there was no mistaking the sudden widening of the pupils to betray the equally sudden awakening of womanly terror.

"Don't be afraid," he began, and he had come thus far on the road to open confession when he saw that she was not looking at him; she was looking past him toward one of the windows giving upon the porch. "What is it?" he demanded, turning to look with her.

"It was a man—he was looking in at the window!" she returned in low tones. "I thought I saw him once before, but this time I am certain!"

Griswold sprang from his chair, and a moment later was letting himself out noisily through the hall door. There was nothing stirring on the porch. He was still groping among the bushes, and Miss Farnham had come to the front door, when the doctor's buggy appeared under the street lights and was halted at the home ditching post.

"Hello, Mr. Griswold; is that you?" called the cheery one, when he saw a bareheaded man beating the covers in his front yard.

memories in Miss Farnham, subsequent ones would serve only to widen the gulf between forgetfulness and recollection by just such distances as the Wahaska Griswold should traverse in leaving behind him the deckhand of the Belle Julie.

How much this might have been modified if he had known that the man whose face Miss Farnham had seen at the window was silently tracking him through the tree-shadowed streets is a matter for conjecture. Also, it is to be presumed that much, if not all, of the complacency would have vanished if he could have been an unseen listener in the Farnham sitting-room, dating from the time when little Miss Gilman pattered off to bed, leaving the father and daughter sitting together under the reading lamp.

At first their talk was entirely of the window apparition, the daughter insisting upon its reality, and the father trying to push it over into the limbo of things imagined. Driven finally to give all the reasons for her belief in the realities, Charlotte related the incident of the afternoon.

By this time the good Doctor Bertie had become the indignant Doctor Bertie.

"We can't have that at all!" he said incisively. "You did your whole duty in that bank matter; and it was a good deal more than most young women would have done. I'm not going to have you persecuted and harassed—not one minute! Where is this fellow stopping?"

The daughter shook her head. "I don't know. He gave me his card, but it has the New Orleans address only."

"Give it to me and I'll look him up tomorrow."

The card changed hands, and for a few minutes neither of them spoke. Then the daughter began again: "I've had another shock this evening, too," she said, speaking this time in low tones and with eyes downcast. "This Mr. Griswold—did I understand you to say that he had lost all of his money?"

"Yes; practically all of it," said the father, without losing his hold upon what a certain great London physician was saying through the columns of the English medical journal.

But afterward, long after Charlotte had gone up to her room, he remembered, with a curious little start of half-awakened puzzlement, that someone, no longer ago than yesterday, had told him that young Griswold was rich—or if not rich, at least "well fixed."

No, Mr. Bosbyahell, you must not confound bellona with bologna. The one belongs to the age of myths and the other to the sausage. The bellona is made chiefly of hot dogs of war, whereas the bologna—well, never mind what the bologna is made of. Shut your eyes and eat it, and be content with the thought that, whatever their origin, it is constructed of little pieces of something, while the other is not.

WHO PAYS?

THE PURSUIT OF PLEASURE

BY EDWIN BLISS

Swiftly she was transported down the years, and found herself once more a bride, standing before a garage. It was her own garage. And it was her husband beside her who held a baby awkwardly in his arms. It was her husband who perched upon the arm of her chair, a great human emptiness in his voice, a mighty yearning on the face of him as he pleaded with her for the rounded complete home she refused to give him. A rustle sounded beside her and she started, afraid to look about, for fear she disturb the vision that had risen so clearly before her. Slowly she turned, looking into a child's inquiring eyes, the eyes of the baby her husband had held that day.

"Don't be afraid, lady," Billie said encouragingly. "I won't hurt you."

A little laugh, half hysterical, sprang from her lips at the infantile assurance. Then, in the relief of the moment, impulsively she reached out and grasped the friendly arms of the child that were extended toward her.

"No, I won't hurt you. I'm not a burglar. I'm Billie," the youngster asserted when he had been sufficiently welcomed.

"I know," she nodded brightly. "You just came to pay me a call, didn't you?"

Billie frowned, cogitating deeply. "No—no, not 'zactly that. Mamma went to sleep and I just came here. I come to play with the boy. Where is the boy?" he started suddenly erect in her arms, looking about eagerly.

"What boy, Billie?" She knew in advance what the answer would be, yet could not refrain from baring her soul to the hurt.

"Why, the boy—your boy—the boy what belongs here."

"But there is no boy here." She wondered at herself, purposely letting the lash of this innocent child's tongue thus scourge her.

"No boy! Why, I thought there was a boy in every house—just like home. I'm the boy in our home." Some quick instinct caused him to reach out and clasp his arms about her neck, the neck of this beautiful creature whose eyes were so sad and longing. "Did he get lost?" he whispered sympathetically.

"No—no, Billie. Yes," she suddenly smiled through the tears that sprang to her eyes. "Yes he got lost a little bit. He just wandered on the way. Don't you understand, Billie?"

"Like mamma will think I got lost when I ain't lost at all. I know where I am."

Together they laughed delightedly at the merry joke they played, this grownup and this child.

"Why, lady, you're crying! What you crying for?" Billie tugged a bit tighter at her neck, roughing her perfectly coiffured hair in his gusty sympathy. "Ain't you happy, lady?"

"That's why I'm crying, Billie—I'm so happy," she murmured.

With a sigh of contentment at this somewhat hazy explanation, Billie curled up in her lap like the healthy little animal he was and proceeded to go to sleep.

Tenderly, an hour later, with a light in her eyes which no one had ever seen there before, she relinquished her precious burden to the mother, smilingly pleading forgiveness for the sleeping truant. And then she turned to meet her husband, just stepping from the car.

Linking her arm in his, she led him to the library, designedly selecting the same chair to seat him in which he, on another day, had seated her; designedly perching upon the arm, toying with his hair while she struggled for words, words that were the harder to utter because of the cold, puzzled look he gave her.

"I'm sorry, Jim," she whispered, finally. "It hasn't been home, has it?"

He did not answer, staring moodily into the leaping flames.

Rita followed the direction of his eyes. It had all seemed so easy when Billie was in her lap, the breaking down of her barriers, the complete surrender that she might reconquer this man's love and cling to it tighter.

"Oh, I wish Billie were here now," she cried, a little catch in her voice. "Then I could make you understand, Jim."

"Billie!" He turned toward her inquiringly and something in her eyes confused him, set his pulses dancing, made everything blurry before him.

"Don't you remember, Jim? Billie—Sam and Mary's baby. Oh, I've had such an adventure. Billie's been visiting me—Billie came over to play with the little boy in our house. He went to sleep in my arms, Jim, went to sleep with his arms about my neck, and they weren't sticky a bit—well, only a little bit. He wanted to play, Jim, with that boy that belongs here and I told him the boy was lost, just a little bit lost. Oh, Jim, don't you—can't you understand—won't you help me—hunt for him?"

He leaped to his feet, his arms flung wide as though to clasp her to him. Blushing rosily, but with the gayest of trickling laughter upon her lips, she caught the expression in his eyes and retreated from him, all eager to be caught that she might lay her face against that shoulder she had regained, yet with the maiden instinct for flight. Back—back and Jim laughingly advancing toward her, laughing with a curious sobbing sound intermingled with it. And then he halted, the shadow of impending catastrophe gripping his icy hand upon him, freezing his blood. His lips uttered a cry of warning, even as she shrieked forth one of terror and appeal. The ripping of lace sounded as her heel caught in a ruffe of her boudoir gown, tripping her. The heavier sound of falling portieres as she dragged them down in clutching for support against the fall.

Thud—thud—James White knew that horrid sound, the thudding of his wife's beautiful body upon the stairs down which she was hurled, would never quit his ears. Thud—thud—a crash, as she brought up against the pilasters on the main floor, and lay there, very still, her white face upturned toward his own.

Doctor Judd gently withdrew himself from the clutching fingers of the Reverend Deane.

"The operation was a complete success and she is almost able to be about," he said, then, as the old man turned away with a sign of relief: "But I think you had better come with me today. She may need you now."

He did not mind the coldness of his son-in-law's reception, did not mind the hesitancy of his daughter's kiss. He deserved all this. He only wished to be with her, to help her in her hour of misery, the misery he could feel running as an undercurrent beneath Doctor Judd's cheery words.

"Yes, little girl, you came through the operation nobly. It was a complete success. I didn't think you had the strength for such a battle as you put up."

Rita blushed, looking meaningfully up at her husband.

"I had just gained untold strength—before the fall."

"Well, it worked wonders. It saved your life, Mrs. White. And now in a few days everything will be as it was before except the happiness of motherhood can never—"

Like tiny threads of steel her fingers gripped his wrist. He nodded, avoiding the horrified expression in those eyes. She did not weep—he only prayed that she would. She merely stared stonily into space. Her husband tenderly placed his hand upon her hair. She did not look at him. The Reverend Deane was upon his knees, fondling her icy fingers, but she seemed not to be aware of his presence.

ence. Doctor Judd motioned them from the room.

"She must be alone until she recovers from the shock," he explained.

Alone?

Always alone she would be. Always alone with the ghosts. Always alone, listening to the pattering of baby feet through the place. Always alone, searching for the "lost" ones she never was to find, though she knew her life would be consecrated to the search.

Stonily she stared; eagerly she listened. And no tears would come, would ever come to soothe and balm the soul of her.

His Discovery.

After a visit to a well-known entomologist, whose wonderful microscopes have proved that there is always some living thing to be found preying on the last of the minutest creatures last seen, a New York writer turned to him and said: "I came here believing myself to be an individual. I leave knowing myself to be a community."
